

TOWN&COUNTRY

Bruce Willis Has a Brand New Upper West Side Apartment

The actor picked up a four-bedroom pad just a few weeks after selling his Central Park West duplex.

by SAM DANGREMOND

FEB 16, 2018

Just a few weeks after selling their Central Park West duplex, actor Bruce Willis and his wife, Emma, have snagged a four-bedroom apartment at One West End, a new Upper West Side development. Scroll down for a look inside their new home.

The couple went into contract on the four-bedroom apartment on February 15.

It's more than 3,000 square feet.

The couple is downsizing from the duplex, which was about 6,000 square feet. They also own a house outside Manhattan, in Bedford Hills, which Elle Decor featured in 2017.

The views are stunning.

The final price has not been reported, but the unit was listed for $7.9 million.

Listing agent John Gomes said the couple was attracted to the home's kitchen.

Gomes told the Wall Street Journal they loved the space, which includes a dedicated pastry-making area and a built-in coffee-machine.

The building's other amenities include a garden terrace with cabanas and a fitness center with a 75-foot-long pool.

➡ One West End was designed by Pelli Clarke Pelli and Hill West Architects, and Jeffrey Beers International oversaw the interiors. Check out more of the luxe benefits here.